Dear Bob,

As we conclude our three year "beginning" in the Master's Program, I am drawn to the idea of knowing more and having an urgent feeling to do more, to help more, to be different. The additional knowledge gained in the classes has created a deeper well of gratitude while also acting as an accelerant to the desire to serve others. The three years journey has revealed a whole new world of thinking and doing which were unseen and unexplored in any depth by me prior to this class. It has created a newer more cleanly focused set of priorities for me, changing in some ways how I use my time and my resources. The tools which come out of the Master's program are tools for life, a life here and an eternal life. It has and will continue to be about changing habits and improving my margin so I can increase the Kingdom work I want to do with the time and talents and treasure I have. If that isn't enough, it is also about sharing the concepts and process with other men who have the same God given potential I have in making a difference in some way in other people's lives.

I started the program as a newly born Christian, not sure of the process but sure of the Way and prepared to listen and learn and read. I remain behind in my reading but feel assured I now have a "life" library to lean on and learn from. It is not always easy to learn about yourself, particularly when you have some clear shortcomings in more than one area of life! Yet, without the benefit of a reasoned approach which is broad and encompassing of so many aspects of life, I may have never put myself in a position to improve who I am to any great degree. The Master's program had provided me the vehicle to think critically and to do it from the perspective of God's grace and love leading to being a Kingdom leader and not a "pew potato". It's given me the confidence in my faith to present my Testimony to my church and to run an event which gathered over 500 people for charity. Without this program and these other men it simply would not have happened.

One of the great joys of this program is having the opportunity to meet and know some men who I can count on to be brothers, confidants, and sounding boards for me. There is comfort in knowing there are other men who have some of the same goals and some of the same issues in their walk as I do in mine. There is safety and protection and love in numbers.

Thank you for introducing me to God's larger purpose for me.
